Injury at week-old park doesn't mar enthusiasm

Andover Skate Park opens; already a big hit with kids

By Neil Fater

After waiting years for a sanctioned skating spot in town, it seems Andover youth aren't going to let a few bumps in the road — or bruises to the body — stop them from enjoying their new skate park.

An ambulance removed a middle-school-age boy from the park Monday after he fractured his collarbone, but later the same day the boy was back at the park with his father to tell everyone he was OK, says Bill Fahey, Youth Services coordinator.

A park supervisor says supervisors used a cellular phone they have to call 911 for Andrew Doherty, the boy who injured himself in-line skating Monday, two days after the park opened. Andrew's mom, Deborah Doherty, said Tuesday that her son was fine.

"He has a fractured collarbone, but they were very, very good at the park about getting him help," she says. "He was wearing all his equipment and he was lucky. They called to check on him later. They were great."

During its first week of operation, the Andover Community Skate Park has proven to be immensely popular with

McGovern calls for test results

By Neil Fater

While Andover resident and gubernatorial candidate

Patricia McGovern is clamoring for the results of statewide student tests, Andover educators say knowing the results before school starts won't affect the way Andover students are taught this fall.

McGovern accused Acting Governor Cellucci Monday of holding the results of the tests until after the November election. She says he's "playing politics again with education reform." Cellucci has reportedly denied that the decision has anything to do with the election, and says releasing the results is solely in the hands of the Department of Education.

As for how all this might affect education here, Andover's superintendent and teachers union president agree that knowing the test results a few months earlier would not have much effect on how Andover teachers teach this coming year. Changes in curriculum are made too far in advance for results released this summer to significantly change one of Industry cleans up its act, reducing hazardous materials

By Rebecca Lipchitz

More information on hazardous materials being used in Andover is available than ever before, as federal law has mandated reporting for 12 years. But few residents inquire about the chemicals in use in their neighborhood, says Health Director Everett Penney.

What the law has done is encourage industrial companies using hazardous materials in their businesses to clean up their acts a bit and do things the safest possible way, he says.

If a company is using certain amounts of certain chemicals, they are required to report them to local authorities, often in the form of a Material Safety Data Sheet filed in the Health Department.

While reducing the toxic materials used in one's business may always be the right thing to do politically, it's not always so easy financially or chemically.

TOWN TALK

Pete's brother, Greg Afarian and cousin, Jim Kochakian.

Golfing in memory of Peter Afarian

Organizers of the second Peter M. Afarian Memorial Scholarship Fund Golf Tournament, held June 29 at Windham Country Club, declared it "a huge success." The tournament raised close to $20,000. The scholarship fund was established by family and friends in memory of Andover High School graduate Peter M. Afarian, who was killed in an automobile accident two years ago. Peter had just completed his first year at Fitchburg State College, where he was a goalie on the hockey team.

Ex-Bruins goalie and coach Gerry Cheevers, Andover High hockey coach Bill Cullen and Fitchburg hockey coach Dean Fuller were among the 144 golfers who took part at Windham Country Club. Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor Janet Jechelian was master of ceremonies and auctioneer.

The winners of the scramble format tourney were Ken Oppenheim, Rob Oppenheim, Dan Hansberry and Fred Hansberry with a 59.

Three strokes back was the foursome of Dr. Larry Larsen, Gerry Silverman, Charlie Wesson and Steven Steward. Shooting a 63 was the team of Bob Mazalewski, B. Keif, Kamm Meehan and Chuck Minaselli.

Closest-to-the-pin winners were Doug Ahearn, Dave Trudel, Dean Fuller and Carmine Vara.

Ray Fecteau and Jennifer Bower won the longest drive contests and Dr. Michael Gogjian claimed the prize for straightest drive.

The tournament included a dinner and door and raffle prizes. Matthew Simpson of Middleton got use of a luxury suite and skybox consisting of 10 tickets at the FleetCenter for a Bruins' game. His winning bid was $1,500. A hockey stick autographed by the Bruins brought in $275 and a private plane trip for four to Martha's Vineyard was auctioned off for $400.

Starting last year, scholarships are awarded to members of the Andover High School hockey team. Last year, two $750 scholarships were awarded and $750 was given to the Fitchburg State College Athletic Department for a goalie coach.

This year three $750 scholarships were awarded to college-bound members of the Andover High hockey team, David Chapin, Scott Ciruso and Adam Colucci, at the Andover High School awards breakfast.

All graduates have exemplified good character and academic achievements this past year, organizers said.

Birds sent away by the Post Office

Andover's Stevens Street Post Office may have an eagle on its stamps, but it's trying to keep birds off its building.

The problem is sparrows nesting in an overhang on the building have made eating outside for the birds, says Barry Begley, Andover postmaster.

These birds have become a nuisance to post office employees eating lunch at a picnic table near one of the building's back doors, he says.

To prevent the sparrows from

NEWS IN BRIEF

Planning Board reviews hotel plan

Princeton Properties is prepared to expand into Andover with a 84-unit extended stay hotel to rival Tewksbury's Residence Inn.

The Planning Board opened and closed the public hearing on the plan for Hawthorn Suites Hotel at 4 Riverside Drive, off River Road, at Tuesday's meeting.

Hawthorn seeks a site plan special permit to put a hotel in an industrial area.

Other than neighbor Russell Doyle (of Doyle Lumber), who mentioned concerns about adequate signage, the plan met with no public comment.

The Hawthorn hotel is part of the Hyatt hotel company that owns Princeton Properties. Their 3.8-acre site has no wetlands, but when the project is finished, it would have a pool.

The hotel is designed for business travelers visiting for 10 days or more. While rooms include a small kitchen, there would be no restaurant or bar in the hotel.

Board members raised concerns that 114 spaces may not provide adequate parking since they expect the building to be running at 80 percent capacity at a minimum and it holds a small meeting room.

Project engineer Joe Penzola says the company would consider saving some space for additional parking, but would keep it green unless it was necessary.

Planning Board members told Doyle that ultimately, signage issues are solved by the Zoning Board.

The Planning Board also took the following votes:

- Denied a request for plan modification to Andover Country Club subdivision.
- Approved Phillips Academy plan to renovate Adams Hall.
- Approved Genetics Institute plan to build a storage facility.
- Approved River Road Microtel Hotel plan with order of conditions.
- Approved the Williams Street subdivision plan.

Unfortunately, he says a pair of adult and baby sparrows that must have been hiding from the worker were mistakenly trapped in the overhang last week when the screen netting was installed.

The netting was eventually cut to free the birds and, as work began, one post office employee called the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals "which was fine," says Begley.

"The MSPCA took away the two

Begley says that after the MSPCA official left, another baby bird was discovered and coaxed out of the overhang.

Salesman told to peddle his wares in other towns

A door-to-door solicitor will be relieving himself of his wares elsewhere after an Andover resident allegedly caught him urinating in the resident's back yard Monday.

Police say the man has been told to stop soliciting in Andover. They say Monday's call about him was the last in a series of complaints during the salesman's short time here.

"This has been an ongoing problem with this kid. He's been in town now several weeks soliciting and we keep getting complaints on him," said Sgt. James Hashem on Monday.

According to residents who complained, the 20-year-old man allegedly had used very aggressive sales tactics, driven over people's lawns, and even made faces at people when he couldn't make a sale, say police.

Hashem says he called the man into the station Wednesday, July 8, and read him the do's and don't's of soliciting in Andover.

"I told him if we had one more complaint, he was all done," says Hashem.

After Monday's incident Hashem says, "He's been told to stay out of Andover — forever and ever."

Hashem says solicitor Richard Clubine, originally from Seattle, was selling children's books for a Nashville company.

Last week Police Chief Brian Pattullo had informed residents that they should report solicitors to police if the salespeople are going around to back doors and windows, or climbing into fenced areas.

Hashem says what Clubine allegedly did also "would fit into that category."

Andover state rep gets to interview all 9 hopefuls

By Neil Fater

He can't hand-pick his successor, but outgoing 18th Middlesex District Representative Edward LeLacheur Saturday will get to personally grill each candidate for his seat about why they should be the person to replace him.

In November, the long-time politician will retire from the state position that represents Andover's Precinct 5. Seven Democrats and a pair of Republicans are vying to take his place.

To give people a better idea about who these candidates are, Gary Balsar, a volunteer producer for Lowell Public Access Cable Channel 3, came up with the idea to have LeLacheur interview the hopefuls. LeLacheur will do so Saturday, July 18, at noon in the Lowell City Hall Council Chamber.

Only LeLacheur will have the chance to ask questions. Each candidate will also tape a three-minute message to the community explaining why they should be elected.

"Ed (LeLacheur) will make up the questions and no one will have advance knowledge of what the questions are," reports a release about the event. "No one except Rep. Ed LeLacheur will be allowed to speak to the candidates once the program begins."

The program will be broadcast every Wednesday night during August on Lowell

Public Access Cable Channel 3.

Because Lowell's council chamber is not air-conditioned, organizers expect the event to be a hot one.

"I only hope that the heat wave ends Friday," jokes John McDonough, another volunteer producer. "Otherwise it will be like an Easy Bake Oven there."

LeLacheur has represented the 18th Middlesex District for 24 years. But he has represented Andover only since 1994, because the 18th Middlesex District was redrawn in 1993 to include sections of Lowell, Tewksbury and Andover.

Zoning Board OK's special permit for the Lanam Club's proposed expansion

By Rebecca Lipchitz

Neighbors upset with the Lanam Club's expansion plan didn't stop it at the Zoning Board meeting last week but they did draw attention to their concerns.

Zoning Board of Appeals members last week approved a special permit for the Lanam Club's proposed expansion plan with a lengthy order of conditions, based on complaints from neighbors, and a past order of conditions issued to the club that some residents say were never enforced.

Atty. Richard Asoian, a former president for the club who volunteered to handle legal affairs for the club expansion, says he never heard a complaint from a resident until he recently brought up the fact that according to an order of conditions issued in 1957, the club should have built their additional parking lot in the back of the building rather than the front.

According to Kaija Gilmore, inspector of buildings, the statute of limitations on such orders of conditions makes them unenforceable if they haven't been dealt with after six years.

"Enforcement is completely complaint-driven," Gilmore says, who says she never received any complaints about the Lanam Club in the building department.

Neighbors of the private club, including some elderly and disabled residents from the Andover Housing Authority apartments at Frye Circle, say the lights and noise around the building are a nuisance.

Frye Circle resident Barbara Hodgdon says residents are disturbed by traffic, noise, conversation, slamming doors, loud music, and lost guests knocking on apartment doors looking for the Lanam Club, but people aren't interested in closing the club.

"We want to see this (plan) scaled back," she says.

NOTHING HAPPENS UNTIL IT'S SOLD

You often hear people in sales quote an old saying: "nothing happens until somebody sells something". This is certainly true in real estate sales. A Realtor spends hours obtaining your listing and filling out the paperwork to get your home in the Multiple Listing Service, but is not paid a dime for doing it. The agent will spend countless hours coaching you on preparing your home, and more hours showing it, but then earns nothing until the sale is actually made. Only after a sale has finally closed does the sales professional see any commission. Are you still concerned about their motivation to keep being productive?

This approach directly benefits you, the seller, because you have a marketing professional who wants to sell your home as badly as you do. You also have the assurance that he or she will make every effort to get the maximum price for your home. The higher the selling price, the better it is for everyone.

If there is anyone in your future, I am ready to serve you. Feel free to visit my office at Prudential Howe and Doherty, Realtors at 12 Bartlet Street, or phone me at 475-5100 x265. Pam Lebowitz has been in consultative sales for over 17 years.

New skate park opens ...

skaters. Organizers said that on Saturday, all 200 registration forms they had ready were taken, completed by kids and their parents, and returned in a surprisingly short time. Organizers brought more of the forms, which include a liability waiver, on Sunday.

But there may be one thing that can slow the park down. Because there is limited shade and water at the sight, Fahey says he may close the park until late afternoon during oppressively hot days.

Otherwise the park will be open from 12:30 to 8 p.m. The park is open exclusively for Andover residents on Mondays and Wednesdays.

There is a risk of injury involved with in-line skating or skateboarding just as there is a risk of breaking a leg while skiing or blowing out a knee while playing football, says Fahey.

But everyone who uses the park must wear safety equipment and sign a waiver releasing the town from responsibility for a skater's injury, say those who oversee the park.

"(Skaters) know in-line skating's a dangerous sport. Any park you're going to do it at, there are going to be injuries," says Julie Viola, a Venture Out counselor who helps oversee the park. "The boy was fine. He came back to the park afterwards and everyone was like, 'Hey, come on out again.'"

Rules for the park include

"skate within your ability," "safety equipment must be worn at all times," and "extreme recklessness will not be tolerated."

"Safety comes first. That's why the kids wear the equipment. If someone tries to sneak in (without equipment) we have a big bullhorn and we say 'Put on the equipment or leave!'" says Viola.

Some skaters may not be ready for the ramps at the park, says Fahey. This is why Youth Services plans to offer an instructional camp for novice skaters during the first week of August.

"I think it's important for kids who have never been to a park before to let us know," says Fahey. "We're just finding we're getting kids who can barely stand up on in-line skates coming to the park."

Viola, a recent Andover High graduate who will attend UMass in the fall, says she wants to learn how to skate herself. "The athletic ability these skateboarders have is unbelievable," she says. "I don't think these kids get enough credit."

Volunteers sought

Adult volunteers are needed at Andover Community Skate Park to assist in registering skaters, checking parent signature forms, and most importantly, just being present to maintain a safe environment. Volunteers are needed for three hours a week, with weekends and early evenings the time most in need of adults.

Carole Chanler, a Friends of Andover Youth organizer, says, "This is a chance to sip from the fountain of youth and feel the energy and vitality of skating. The park is a place of delight. Watching the most ancient of skateboard moves, the grind, lifts the spirit and strengthens the heart." Call Chanler at 470-1550.

Lanam Club ...

Conditions of Zoning Board's approval

The Zoning Board's approval was given on the condition that nine orders be met:

- Add signage so drivers heading south on Route 28 will see the driveway.
- Turn off exterior lights when the club is closed for the night.
- Prohibit lengthy idling of buses or delivery trucks.
- Draw attention of the Planning Board to problems of the shared entrance between the Lanam Club and Frye Circle.
- Draw attention of the Planning Board to the path and implications of runoff.
- Add trees or a form of screening to keep in noise and light.
- Limit clean-up after a night function to 1/2 hour after closing.
- Direct all complaints about the club to the Building Inspector and make the records available to the public.
- Use methods and materials in keeping with historical nature of the existing building, as proposed in the plan.

Ron Hajj, head of the Andover Housing Authority, says he held meetings with residents about the plan, but does not take a position to support or oppose the expansion plan.

Asoian told the meeting that the club would consider scaling back the proposed dining room addition of 52 seats, but added that more than 80 percent of the project is part of a federal mandate to make the club handicapped-accessible.

"If we're bothering those people we've got to do something. That's not just rhetoric. This is a very socially conscious group of people, the members of our club."

Peter M. Hadley, who lives in a private residence on Joyce Terrace, says the Lanam Club has not been a good neighbor and never responded to past complaints.

"This guest in our neighborhood has misbehaved and treats us like a guest," Hadley says.

Hadley and other residents complained that the club holds functions beyond its permitted use and does not comply with previous orders of conditions.

Cornelius Wood, a neighbor of the Lanam Club whose family sold the land on which the Lanam Club is built, believes the special permit should be revoked, and the club should be converted to a single-family home and sold.

"It (the expansion project) makes it not resalable or marketable as a residence," he says.

Wood says his letters of complaint have been ignored. "We looked the other way. We wanted to see the Lanam Club succeed, but nothing was ever taken care of."

Zoning Board Chairman Daniel Casper says the expansion project doesn't include any activity that doesn't already happen at the club. "I don't ever remember turning down a special permit for improvements to a property," he says, but recommended that residents who have complaints about the club under the new order of conditions seek enforcement through the building department.

Zoning Board member Peter Reilly says he doesn't expect the conditions to be taken lightly.

"It's time to pull up your socks and expect the conditions to be adhered to," Reilly says.

Skate Park dreams come true

Word is racing across town like hot wheels: the Andover Community Skate Park is happening. Finally. All of the patience and hard work of Andover Youth Services and the Friends of Andover Youth has paid off.

Building a local skate park to call their own has taught kids a lot about how government works, how to work within the system. The community responded generously. For years kids had wanted a place to skate without being hassled. Town Meeting approved $45,000 for the skate park in April.

Then the ramps were built. But with five weeks of rainy weather, the Vermont builders needed more time to make sure the ramps were assembled correctly. The last of the heavy rain delayed the set-up and knocked out the scheduled 4th of July grand opening.

Now, during its first week up and running, the new skate park has been incredibly popular. Why's that?

The park's purpose statement reads, "The Andover Community Skate Park is a positive and safe environment open to all ages and abilities, which promotes and encourages individual expression, and learning. The park provides a positive atmosphere centered around respect for others and, most importantly, fun."

About a dozen skating structures, ramps and platforms make up the skate park, at the tennis courts behind West Middle School. Included there are a 5-foot-tall, 24-foot-wide mini half pipe; a 4-foot tall, four-sided pyramid; and two 20-foot handrails. This should prove more challenging to skaters than the rails outside Memorial Hall Library, and that makes things a lot less challenging to library patrons.

Everyone who uses the park must wear safety equipment and sign a waiver releasing the town from responsibility for a skater's injury. Organizers ran out of forms Saturday when 200 kids were ready to skate.

Kids are happy they finally have their own place. They deserve one. Main Street businesses — from the library past CVS to Dunkin' Donuts — should be happy, too.

The Department of Community Services sponsors a series of Wednesday evening concerts in the Park at Bartlet and Chestnut streets during the summer. Gayle Anderson and Bob Gram entertained last Thursday, which was the rain date. The scheduled group next Wednesday, July 22, The Debbie Weyl Band, has a western sound. The show starts at 6 p.m.

Put the service back in 'customer service'

Your fortune: May you not be taken to the cleaners

Jack Grady

Consider the lost art of customer service. You might have a medical appointment, or need to get your car fixed, or have to deal with an insurance company or a bank, or you might be traveling. It helps to have a flexible attitude. Especially when you find that, in the immortal words of Neil Young, "you pay for this, and they give you that."

Sometimes, responding in these situations is automatic. Sometimes things work out nicely. Other times, life hands you a Zen lesson.

'FIRST I LOOK AT THE PURSE'

"The doctor will be in to see you in a moment." Now there's a myth, especially when he's a specialist.

Now, we're all busy, but when a doctor keeps a patient in an exam room for an hour and 45 minutes, the Guinness Book of World Records people start to wait by the phone. And after you've finished all the work you've brought with you, anticipating another "glacial" wait in the allergist's little exam room, and after you've zipped through most of the magazines in the office, and you still have time to read the Guinness Book of Records...

So it's almost 3 p.m. Tuesday, a busy day at the Townsmen, and I had a 1 o'clock appointment. The allergist lumbers in, reading the nurse's notes on my chart. "So, how've you been?"

Since three months ago? Or since 1 o'clock?

"Is there a problem?"

Well, yeah, there is... Why didn't you schedule me for 3 o'clock, if that's when you were going to see me? Your nurse said there are four of us, in these little rooms here, who all have 1 o'clock appointments.

"That's how we book appointments in this office."

But you've spent the last 45 minutes with drug reps in the hallway, getting drug samples, books, mouse pads, lunch, and other free stuff. And it's not the first time. I waited an hour last visit, just to get an allergy shot.

"Why was that?"

Because one of your shot-givers said, "I'm not giving any shots to her patients. That (witch) didn't cover for me when I was at lunch."

"Well, you know whose fault this is," he responded. "Hillary Clin-

Excuse me? Hillary Clinton?

"Well, sure. This is what happens as the country moves closer and closer to national health insurance. We can't charge enough to cover our costs, and so the quality of the help we get 'rachets down' to an unacceptable level. There's nothing we can do about it. Write your congressman! Now let's take your blood pressure."

Don't bother. It won't mean anything. How many more shots do I need?

"Three months. Maybe six. We'll see."

After three more shots, I figured I wasn't going to sneeze any worse. And you know, there's a lot of Tuesdays now when I don't miss him at all.

'HERE COME OL' FLATTOP'

An insurance adjuster is standing by our front door, regarding the hedges in front of our house. Not because they're 80 years old. Because there was a Hyundai in the hedges, instead of on the street.

"So you're the guy with the car in his hedges. The driver's insurance company faxed me your estimate. What happened?"

I explained how my wife, Lin, had come home to find a section of the hedges, four feet high and four feet thick, just lying there on the front lawn.

A/B schedule is preferable to last year's

Editor, Townsmen:

I was glad to read Lisa Perdigao's letter to the editor (July 9 Townsmen).

Thank you, Ms. Perdigao, for sharing your experiences. I agree that subjects like math and foreign language need the continuum of a whole year. The proposed A/B system will achieve that.

I am the parent of an AHS student, and I was disappointed with the block scheduling this past year. It did not seem that every teacher had made up a new teaching plan to adjust to the longer class time, and consequently, some might not have been able to finish the entire curriculum. The students appeared to have done better since so many were on the honor roll; but I wonder if the numbers are deceiving, if the SAT II scores will show eventually that our students were actually taught less material in some subjects.

If a teacher was absent this past year for three consecutive days, the students could conceivably miss 3 X 82 minutes worth of a course, since there was a shortage of subs. The sophomores also spent three weeks with testing, which meant more missed class time. With A/B implemented, absences will hopefully be less detrimental.

If extending the school day and school year is not an option to meeting the Mass. State requirement, and we are stuck with the semester system, I feel that the A/B schedule is preferable to last year's. I urge the School Committee not to make any changes again at this point. The students have all received their new schedule, and we should avoid a repeat of last September's school opening.

Flawed school population projections create flawed space strategies

Editor, Townsmen:

Here we go again. Headlines blare that we need more school space. Yes,

Teachers are already tested

Editor, Townsmen:

Recently, Acting Governor Cellucci ignited a firestorm when he filed legislation that would require veteran teachers to pass a standardized test or be fired. Whether Cellucci truly believes that this test will improve teaching, or whether the test is simply another election-year gimmick, I really can't say. What I can say with absolute certainty, however, is that a standardized test will not improve the quality of education in Andover or in any other community in Massachusetts.

The truth is that Massachusetts public school teachers are already being tested, and being tested with more thoroughness and rigor than any paper-and-pencil test could provide.

The Education Reform Act of 1993 mandates a comprehensive system of evaluation to weed out incompetent teachers and ensure quality education. This evaluation system includes performance standards (which, in Andover, were recently updated to meet the Department of Education guidelines), performance evaluations, recertification and professional development requirements.

Andover's professional development program has been showcased as a model by the state Department of Education. I myself have taught professional development courses in the areas of economics, foreign policy and the media. Readings for these courses included works by Adam Smith, J.M.

Keynes and Karl Marx. Mastering such sophisticated material and demonstrating this mastery, both in writing and orally, certainly tests a teacher's literacy far better than a standardized test.

The need to attract "the best and the brightest" to teaching has become increasingly obvious to the public, the media and our political leaders. Andover can be proud of the caliber of its public school faculty, many of whom have been honored with awards and fellowships, including Fulbright and National Endowment for the Humanities fellowships. Several teachers have also made Who's Who in America's Teachers.

Public education is working in Andover because education reform is working. And education reform is working because Andover teachers are making it work. Teachers are spending long hours and great amounts of energy upgrading curricula and raising academic standards while, at the same time, meeting rigorous performance standards, recertification requirements and professional development mandates. To ensure the continuing quality of our schools, teachers also need public support and respect. What we don't need is the superficial hurdle of another standardized test to jump over.

Thomas Meyers
President,
Andover Education Association

we need some classrooms now. No, there is no demographic justification for adding large amounts of space for higher student enrollment five to 10 years from now. Since CUBA wasn't invited to participate on the Schools Space Task Force, here is one member's public response.

Town citizens should be deeply disappointed in the rigor of the population modeling that is being held out as the basis for needing future school space. Three different projections are pointed to as proof that more space is needed. Problem is there is no rigor in any one of these projections and the basis methodology employed is flawed in all three cases.

The Schools Space Needs Task Force has not used the town's own "Growth Study" produced by Commonwealth Research Group Inc. on March 11, 1998, for the town's planning group and the "town administrator." This excellent document uses more sophisticated modeling techniques than used by the task force. Its cohort component model is the same one employed by the Massachusetts Institute for Social and Economic Research.

Here are some direct quotes from the town's own "Growth Study":

• "Total town population has remained fairly constant since 1989."

• "School enrollment peaked in 1974 at 6,460 students, then declined steadily to 4,645 students in 1988. The 1996 enrollment increased to 5,503 students and was only 85 percent of the 1974 enrollment."

• "Despite declining enrollments, expenditures on education increased in both nominal and inflation-adjusted terms over this entire time frame. Expenditures increased 85 percent in nominal terms and 25 percent after removing the impact of inflation."

• Population is projected at 31,315 in the year 2000 and 32,753 in the year 2010.

Student-aged population will decline as a percentage of the total as the town ages. "Andover will have 942 more residents over the age of 60 in 2000 than it did in 1990. By the year 2010, the number will be 2,876 more residents over age 60."

The "Growth Study" goes on to say, "The growth among the student-aged population will be a mere five students during this same time frame." Yet the Space Needs Task Force is projecting an increase of close to 500 students in the K-8 bracket and a total space need for 899 students. This conclusion does not jive with the following critical population planning factors:

• Town residents are aging;
• Number of children per family has declined from prior periods;
• New residents are older due to higher cost of housing stock.

Tens of millions of school and town capital and operating costs should not be planned on flawed student population projections. As has been indicated recently in the letters written about the continuing block-scheduling fiasco in the high school, what is involved here is a continuous power play. More bricks and mortar create more school administrative and operating overheads and more costly new programs.

All townspeople should plan on attending the upcoming space task force review meeting on July 21 to nip another boondoggle in the bud by asking to review base planning assumptions.

Let's start focusing on the real needs of students, teachers and taxpayers, not on the interests of contractors, architects, consultants and administrators.

Forum on the future of the Essex Sand and Gravel Pit at Rec Park set for July 23 in Memorial Hall

An open forum on the future of the Essex Sand and Gravel Pit at Recreation Park will be held next Thursday, July 23, at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall at Memorial Hall

Library.

The future of this key ecological area has come into question.

The town plans to convert the area to playing fields and has begun the project without town consent, organizers contend.

A brief video, detailing the ecology of the area, will be shown demonstrating that the gravel pit is an essential part of Andover's largest and most healthy ecosystem.

"Please come and show your support for Andover's environment," said organizers, who include Michael Jones (470-2714), Marc D'Agostino, Lisabeth Willey, Lauren Chabot, Thomas O. Jones and Brent Siniawski.

Andover Bank announces Guess the Number of Frogs contest winner

Elizabeth Kelly, 7, of North Andover was the winner of the Guess the Number of Gummi Frogs contest held during Andover's annual Bazaar Days last month. Elizabeth's guess of 420 was only one away from the exact number (421) of frogs in the candy jar. She was presented with a $100 U.S. Savings Bond as well as all 421 Gummi Frog candies. More than 700 contest entrants will be sent a letter acknowledging their participation. Because these children took the time to visit Andover Bank's booth to guess the number of candies, the bank will reward them with a special offer. If they open a new Early Investor Account with as little as a $10 deposit, they will receive a free pocket calculator. The account was designed to introduce children to the world of savings and investments.

Standing the heat: Shortest retirement in history

By Neil Fater

Just when Bill and Joanne Antoniadis thought their lives would be griddle-free, they were thrown back into Andover's lunchtime fire.

The Antoniadises, owners of My Brother's Pizza Place for nearly 10 years, have discovered their planned retirement from Andover isn't what they planned it to be.

That's because when the man they sold My Brother's to back in April discovered he was not cut out for the sandwich business, the Antoniadises agreed to take the place back.

Their "retirement" lasted exactly zero days.

In fact, many frequent customers probably never realized that for 10 days the shop was officially in someone else's name because Bill Antoniadis never left the shop. He stayed on during a transition phase to show the new owner the pita pizza ropes, and introduce him to his regular clientele, but the transition was never completed once the new owner got a taste of lunchtime crunch.

Now, Bill Antoniadis says once selectmen transfer the common victualers license back in his family's name, everything related to the Post Office Avenue pizza place will officially be theirs again.

He says people don't realize how difficult it is to prepare dozens of sandwiches and pies for people who have only 30 minutes to eat.

"This is a high-stress environment. If you have a hidden medical problem this will bring it out. Not just here but at any short-order fast food place," he says. "Every sandwich is different. I can go through 12 dozen (loaves of) bread in one hour, and never make the same sandwich the same way. That's a challenge."

Still grilling after all these years - Bill and Joanne Antoniadis (with Sophie) "still make lunch for half of Andover."

It's a challenge that the Antoniadises have mastered - but not everyone can. As the store's third owner, Bill Antoniadis says he understands this. He struggled during his first year of club sandwiches, chicken fingers and pepperoni pizzas.

"I don't want to sound corny here but I couldn't have done it without my wife," he says. "She's even more a part of this than I am. That first year, she held the place together. After that, I was OK."

"My wife and I worked side by side every night for about six and a half years, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.," he says. "We were here for 10 years for 80 hours a week. We'd just come in and put our heads down."

After Joanne had their daughter

Sophia, "her hours went down from 80 to 30," he says.

Now, he says, "After 10 years it's second nature but for someone that's staring out, it's a lot of stress."

Yet, Antoniadis says someday he will start again and try something new, potentially with his brother.

"My next venture will be more from scratch," he says. "It's definitely going to be a bigger sale. We're going to have a beer-and-wine license. I've done the lunch thing. I want to challenge myself with the dinner."

No sale

Bill Antoniadis says he and his wife decided to sell the business this spring because his parents moved away from the area, and he and his wife had been working at My Brother's for nearly 10 years.

"We bought it for the long term (on 8/8/88) and we thought, long term, it was best to get out," he says. "I think the store's peaked. If anyone can come in here and raise sales, more power to him."

He and his wife wanted to move to Rhode Island or New York to be closer to family, and Bill Antoniadis says he wanted a new challenge.

But after the sale took place, the new pizza shop owner decided he had bit off more than he could chew.

"Good Friday weekend, his eyes were bugging out," says Bill Antoniadis. "He's fine now so I can joke about it, but after the Friday lunch I looked over and knew he was having second thoughts."

"He came to me and said, 'We can't run this place. We don't want to run it into the ground,'" said Bill Antoniadis. "I talked to my wife and we

Dial M for moneyCustodians pay back town for personal phone calls*By Neil Fater

Andover schools are calling on some of their custodians to hang up their habit of using school phones to make personal, long-distance phone calls.

Three or four Andover High School custodians have been asked to pay back a total of $50 for calls they made this past school year, says school business manager Bernie Tuttle.

Although custodians aren't taking the school department to the cleaners with private long-distance phone calls, Tuttle wants to make sure the dialing-with-Andover-dollars stops.

"We're looking into personal phone calls, trying to tighten up the use of the phone. I think a lot of organizations do that," he says. "We don't see it as a big abuse problem. Right now we're focusing on the custodians and we'll look at all the staff eventually."

Tuttle says the High School custodians' phone calls were watched from September until April.

These custodians will be "reimbursing" the town about $50, but have legitimized some of the personal calls they made, he says.

The school department does not have a problem with people calling home to let their families know they might be late, for instance, says Tuttle.

Most of the custodians calls were to their homes, rather than to places like Hawaii, he says.

"The majority of them were to personal residences," he says. "I'm sure when we get into it, we'll find that some people are (calling far-off places)."

Principals from Andover's two middle schools and an elementary school have been asked to give their custodians "the 4-1-1" about the issue, and all employees will be expected to use the phone for business purposes only, says Tuttle.

When asked if disciplinary action was taken against the custodians Tuttle chuckles, "No. Not at all."

He says he doesn't want any kind of communication breakdown regarding why the phone crackdown is taking place.

"I want to emphasize the issue isn't collecting the money, it's to get the point across that the phones are for business use only," he says.

"When I came on board one of the things I thought was lax was the use of the phones," says Tuttle.

"Where I used to work (Canton, Mass.), we used to have log sheets to keep track of how the phones were used."

said, "If we don't do this, the store's going to close."

At 25 years, My Brother's Place is one of the oldest sandwich shops in Andover and the Antoniades didn't want it to close, he says.

"I gave them their money back, they went on their way and I'm still here," he says.

Actually, Antoniadis gave the buyer his down payment back "minus expenses." The potential buyer also paid their lawyer's fees, lost money on inventory he bought, and forfeited profits made while the business was still in his name but was being run by Antoniadis.

But as Antoniadis points out, "A lot of people would say, 'I've got your check, I've got your money. Bye!'" And Antoniadis let the man out of the deal.

He takes pride in the fact that the shop never closed during this time - and after 10 years of working nearly 80 hours a week, most people would say he has a right to.

The hungry crowd that flocks to the sandwich shop should also be happy to hear that three years ago Antoniadis signed a 25-year lease so that the shop "is not something that's going away," he says.

Bill Antoniadis adds that he had some mixed feelings about selling the shop in the first place.

"A lot. That was the major thing. I'm not just throwing bull at you, I feel attached to the area. In 10 years, except for the fire (when teen arsonists briefly closed the shop in early December), we never had an incident at this place," he says.

"I'm comfortable with my wife closing the store because of the area."

Classical art singer Marcus DeLoach to perform Nov. 1 at Collins Center

By Neil Fater

When 1992 Andover High School graduate Marcus DeLoach was singing on the Collins Center stage as a ninth-grader in Oklahoma!, he says he wasn't thinking he was on his way to performing in some of America's opera houses.

Marcus DeLoach

But as he prepares to return to the Collins Center for a Nov. 1 Dollars for Scholars fundraising performance, DeLoach has already realized that dream. Coming off a three-year run at the Opera Theatre of St. Louis, the budding baritone is set to make his debut at several venues this fall.

Despite early success, however, DeLoach realizes carving out a career as a classical arts singer is not an easy task.

"It's full of the flavor-of-the-month. People say, 'Here's the new, up-and-coming singer,' and then a short time later you never hear of them again," he says.

DeLoach is hoping he can be one of the few to turn his voice into his vocation.

"It's sort of like sports. The superstars get the big money," he says. "I have high hopes for the future. I want to be financially secure and have a lot of pride in the work that I'm doing. I don't know if that means I'll be teaching voice in North Reading or singing on the stage of the Met.

"Hopefully the life of an opera singer spans until they're 60," says DeLoach. "That's what I know it can be, should be and hopefully will be. From age 40 to 50 are the best years for a baritone."

At age 24, then, you might think DeLoach is just warming up his vocal chords. But the young singer already has several awards on his mantle. DeLoach will also make his debut at London's Wigmore Hall in September. He'll follow that with his debut at the Boston Lyric Opera, where he'll play Marquis in La Traviata to open the company's new home in the Schubert Theater.

Then, it's back to his old Andover stomping grounds Nov. 1 to perform classical arts songs at the Collins Center.

DeLoach is in Andover this week to check out the acoustics at the center for his Nov. 1 performance and has deemed the stage A-OK even after years of well-documented neglect.

"Whoever built the Collins Center knew what they were doing enough, that it is fine," he says. "Inside, it basically looks the same as when I left it."

DeLoach says he's looking forward to coming back here because he'll feel less inhibited and can experiment a bit with his performance.

He plans to do a classical repertoire, but not an operatic one. The first half of the performance will be in Italian and German, and the second half in English. He plans to end with some Broadway tunes "hopefully for wider appeal," he says.

DeLoach himself enjoys older Broadway tunes, and doesn't listen to a lot of pop music, outside of Elton John. He admits some classical singers are frustrated by the attention paid to rock singers.

"We don't hate pop music, but of course it's depressing if classical arts are dying and people aren't going to see them," he says. "It's partly the public's fault, but it's the responsibility of the classical artists to provide something that's exciting to watch."

His Nov. 1 recital is the type of thing that he hopes will connect with audiences.

"Recitals are a nice thing to do. It's a very intimate kind of performing," he says. "There's no one but you and the pianist so it's an opportunity (to express yourself), instead of having a million opinions and directions coming from other people."

"A lot of these songs were written to be given in a living room with a piano," he says. "These are truly the best when you're in someone's house."

Learning how to market

By Rebecca Lipchitz

It's back to the drawing board for James Newell, aspiring Andover entrepreneur, who dreams of opening a $2 movie theater.

He was one of 25 area students who spent two weeks at Business Camp coming up with a business plan all their own and trying to flesh it out on paper.

Newell, a senior at Andover High School in September, found out his plan to run a cinema at $2 a ticket just didn't add up, but he's hoping to work out an alternative before the program ends this week.

The Greater Lawrence School to Careers Initiative added a second session to its summer business camp program, which lets students develop their own business plan and work it out using hands on exercises and lessons in economics, market research, stocks, law and taxes, time management and ethics and lectures from local business people.

"They (speakers) each had a vision for what it takes," says instructor JoAnn Samra, a teacher at Andover High School and the Business Camp.

Five Andover students - Newell, Nicholas Branzetti, Gregg Rybicki, Matthew Sheehan, and Jared Solomon-Beloin - attended the camp, which set up shop with retail operations in front of Old Town Hall on a hot Tuesday afternoon.

Samra, a business teacher at Andover High School, says she expects about the same number of Andover students in the second session of 25 new students beginning next week next week.

The program also includes speakers from the local business community.

At the end of the week, Solomon-Beloin will know more about how to run a coffee shop, even though his idea started on a whim.

Branzetti, who plans to be a business major when he graduates from Andover High School next year, says the most important thing he learned this week were the importance of people skills.

"The more you learn in that department the better off you'll be. (The program) is really community-minded," Branzetti says.

In his first public display of business savvy, Branzetti mentioned the help of the programs sponsors Putnam Investments and Merrimack College.

Outside Old Town Hall Tuesday are David Lee (North Andover), Matthew Sheehan (Andover), and Jared Solomon-Beloin (Andover). The three boys sold candy they bought at BJ's. Matthew Sheehan said, "By combining our money we were able to buy $75 worth of candy. Whatever we didn't sell was a bonus because we only bought candy that we liked. You could say it was a win, win, situation!"

Putnam Investments gave each student $25 to work with for the week to realize a small business plan. Students were encouraged to form partnerships and pool their money.

Sheehan and Solomon-Beloin spent their start-up money on candy to sell at their table at Old Town Hall.

They were packing a lot of it up at the end of the day Tuesday.

"It doesn't bother us. We bought stuff we liked," Sheehan says. He plans to work on his landscaping business project later this week as a more realistic form of revenue.

"There, I'm hoping to make money," he says.

The program is also assisted by E-Zone Team, BJ Wholesale and Lisa Wilson at Old Town Hall.

Your fortune ...

Our neighbors came over and told her that there had been a bad accident. The local paper showed up and took photos, they said.

Amazingly, there were no serious injuries, but the woman at fault could have had her own chapter in Profiles of Classic Massachusetts Drivers. Up the hill six houses away, she had pulled out of a side street, and smacked into a north-bound Nissan, sending it east, which spun her around (into the passenger seat) and her Hyundai continued down the hill, in reverse, jumped the curb, and sailed into our hedges, like musical chairs, rear-end-first. The police told her the thickness of the hedges, folded under the Hyundai, kept her from crashing into the house.

The insurance adjuster frowns, looking at the estimate I had given him, prepared by a local landscaping company. The total came to $886.94. What's wrong, I asked. I showed him a picture in the local paper. That's my house, I pointed. That's her Hyundai in the hedges.

"I got no problem with the eight-foot row of hedge plants," he said. "But I don't see no peat moss here, so I'm not allowing that, and it shouldn't take two guys working eight hours at $30 per hour to do the job. Two guys, working four hours.

I'll allow that." He writes down "4@ $30 = $120."

He flashes his clipboard at me, having "adjusted" the estimate almost in half, to $520. "I'll allow that. Have a good day."

About two weeks went by, during which time we saw the video The Rainmaker, based on John Grisham's novel about an evil insurance company. Its motto: "Deny all claims for one year."

The following Monday I phoned the claims agent, and said I would not accept the check based on the insurance adjuster's sloppy math or bad attitude.

"But we have to show we listened to his advice. How about if we split the difference?" she said.

How about if I submit some additional estimates, such as one from the snootiest garden center in the town we live in, instead of the one from the landscapers who live on my street?

"No, you won't have to do that... But I can't give you the whole $886.94. It won't look right."

OK, but let's fix his problem with multiplication first. Two guys, four hours each. Not "four hours." So add back the $120 he was off by. Now add back the materials, the peat moss and fertilizer that he took off. How much is that? OK. Now, let's split the difference.

"OK, I got $856.95. Will you accept that? Look, I can't give you the whole thing. We have to show we took off something."

Fine. You send it, I'll sign it.

"You will? Oh, that's great. Thank you. That's great. I'll send it right out. You have a good day."

After I hung up, I realized I forgot to add in therapy for the hedges. They still get the shakes whenever a Hyundai drives past the house.

'MONEY MONEY MONEY... MONEY'

Once mortgage rates fell below 7 percent, refinancing our home mortgage got squeezed into an already busy springtime. I called the bank holding our two-year-old mortgage, to find out its current rates. And then the bank with our checking and savings accounts. And then one more bank, to keep everyone honest.

This would be our fourth time signing on the dotted line with Bank A, our present mortgage-holder, but it surprised us by having the highest rates. Banks B and C were both lower.

Then Bank B, where we already did most of our regular banking, dropped even lower. As a courtesy, I invited our mortgage banker to come by with his best proposal. No fancy footwork here.

His bottom line: ...pay more and stay with him!

Not for $10,000 or $20,000 more than the others, I replied.

"Try to think of it as only 4 or 8 bucks a week," he said.

Times 300 months? Fine. You pay it.

"Hey, I can't do that. I'll go broke if I do that."

Buh-bye.

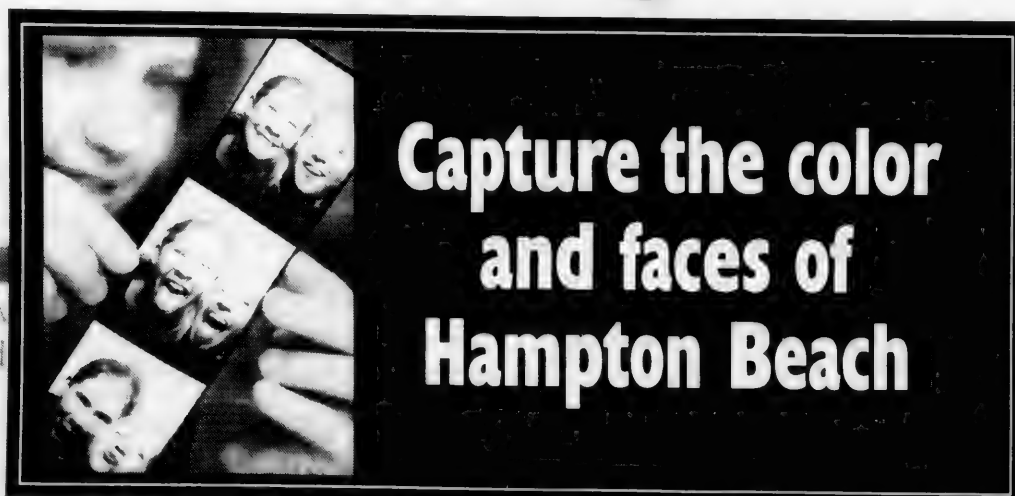

'CARRY ON, MY WAYWARD SON'

Going on vacation to Santa Fe, my wife and son and I flew from Boston to Albuquerque with a change of planes in Minneapolis. We arrived in Albuquerque to find one of our bags had a cracked handle. We were forced to gate-check them when a Minneapolis gate agent limited passengers to one carry-on each; and I also had a soft briefcase. I said the rolling carrier was an expensive bag, and it fit in the overhead bin on the first leg, from Boston, but she shrieked that "It's not my problem, and you're not getting on that plane with two bags." It arrived with the handle separated into two pieces. The baggage clerk had me fill out a form, and said it could be repaired back in Boston.

Arriving back in Boston, I was informed I'd have to leave the bag there, and take my belongings home in a plastic bag. I would get the mended luggage back "in about a month." Right. As it was the only option he would offer, I chose to have it repaired at my expense.

A few months later, waiting to board a flight in the Norfolk/Va. Beach airport, one of the gate attendants came out from behind the counter into the waiting area, and said "You're not bringing that bag on this flight." Why not? "Because it won't fit. It's too big! It's a full flight." I said, "Sir, it fit in the overhead bin on the way down here." He told me, in front of about 50 passengers, to go put it in the holder in front of the ticket counter. So I did. And it fit. Everyone in the area smiled. One man applauded.

Once seated, I looked up to see a dead-heading crew member who was rolling down the aisle four pieces of luggage, all tied together with a black bungee cord. And yes, it was all hers. All four pieces. No wonder passengers are limited!

A few months later my wife and I had another trip on the same airline. Not wanting to deal with any more hyper personnel, we checked our rolling carry-on bags at Logan curbside check-in.

Upon arrival at O'Hare Airport, the wheel-and-extendable-cart part of my wife's bag was totally mangled, as if from a fall from 38,000 feet. Or else the bag had been thrown, and the base platform wrenched apart at the bottom, preventing it from rolling. The baggage office clerk merely shrugged and pointed to a sign that the airline wasn't responsible for damage to the outside of the bag. I couldn't even manage to roll it out of the office. I asked for a supervisor, who was unsympathetic. I said that I had had this kind of trouble only twice — both times with this airline. I pointed out that the damage was caused by such torque or impact that it looked like it had been thrown. She said it probably was — it's very cold outside, so the baggage crew "couldn't be expected to be gentle."

No, and neither can the bull in the proverbial china shop.

When I wrote to the woman who was "Manager of Customer Relations at Worldwide Headquarters," offering to share some of my impressions of flying on their airline, I received some good news in return... Compensation for the aggravation and for the two destroyed bags, in the form of airline tickets.

The bad news — we would have to fly on their planes, one more time.

'RUST NEVER SLEEPS'

My Toyota Celica was starting to sound like a gunboat, so I took it into the local muffler emporium in the town I used to live in, where it had been numerous times before. It's a congenital thing with Toyotas.

It was the first really great spring day, and the parking lot was totally empty. The manager, behind the counter, was a slightly redneck version of the Maytag repairman. Lonesome, with a bit of a twang.

"Heard you comin' down the street," he said.

That would be me... I cheerfully handed him the bright gold folder stuffed with receipts from all of their previous work. Looks like that lifetime-muffler thing is finally going to pay off today, I said.

"We'll throw it on the rack and have a look-see."

That's the first inkling of trouble, when people talk like that.

It was a perfect afternoon to wait out-

But five minutes later he's fretting and pacing.

"Billy found some problems."

This guy Billy comes out from under the car, beaming as if he's had some kind of epiphany. He starts talking a-mile-a-minute at me, how I need to replace the A-pipe, the B-pipe, the junction box, something universal, dangerous levels of carbon monoxide, a serious build-up, then "that's all she wrote."

I admit I wasn't paying rapt attention, as I was singularly struck by his impression — of a potato.

A human potato. Short guy, shaved head, white skin that every inch or so had a dirt spot or a grease mark. If not for the uniform, he'd look like a raw potato.

He got my attention, though, by punctuating his last sentence with a ballpoint pen, stabbing my Toyota's tailpipe so it punched holes and rained rust on all three of us.

Hey hey hey, what do you think you're doing?

(Now I had interrupted Spud Boy's reverie.)

"Sorry, that's how we show a customer they need to replace something."

By turning the tailpipe into a flute? Just how much is this going to cost? I evidently said the magic word.

"Come over here and I'll add it up. Let's see, this plus this plus this plus this plus this plus this, plus two of these... $685.17. Plus tax.

"That's right," the manager said. "I'm not in the Seabrook shop today, so there's tax here."

Fine. How much is covered by the warranty?

"Nuthin'," the manager said.

"Nuthin'," Spud Boy agreed. "But if you do it today, I'll throw in an oil change. Which I don't hafta do, by the way."

An oil change... And nothing is covered by the warranty, you said.

"Nuthin'," the manager said. They agreed on this.

Nuthin'. So now I'm free to take it to my mechanic, at Vinnin Square Service, and have him fix it.

"Well, you could... but we wouldn't recommend it."

Why not? ...'Cause you're on commission?

"...Cause we're the exhaust specialists. But if you get a lower price, we'll match it."

The next day, Bill, the owner of Vinnin Square Service, says, "OK, Jack, you're all set. Exhaust, oil change, state inspection. That'll be $155.48. Gee, those other guys must've thought they had a live one."

I guess that's why states have attorneys general.

McGovern calls for test results ...

next year's courses, they say.

"My guess is probably in three or four months you're not going to be able to make significant adjustments to the curriculum," says Andover Superintendent Claudia Bach. Although some staff members are working on curriculum this summer, the curriculum for many fall courses is already in place, says union president Tom Meyers.

But McGovern says students and taxpayers have a right to know how students fared on the MCAS tests, which were taken statewide by three grade levels of students.

"It is Week 8 and Day 52 since all fourth-, eighth- and tenth-graders took the test, and the results are nowhere in sight," says McGovern. "Whatever the outcome, we need to have a discussion about how far we have to go to fulfill the promise of education reform - and how the current administration plans to get us there."

Officials should be able to grade the tests before the November elections, she says.

"Our children will be back in school for two months before they find out how they did on last year's test," says McGovern. "Election Day will mark Day 165 since the test was taken. Surely we have the capacity to correct these tests in 165 days. The administration claims that these tests were not a political event. But sitting on the results until after the election is nothing more than a political decision."

Whether or not the decision was political, Andover educators say they knew before the tests were taken that they would not receive results until the fall.

Superintendent Bach says Marinel McGrath, her assistant superintendent, has told her there were six million open-response questions answered by students and each of these answers needs to be read and graded. This takes time, and Bach notes Andover teachers who are helping to grade the test did not start this work until after school ended, in late June.

"Since the inception of the tests we had been told results were going to be released in the fall," says Meyers, union president. "This is the first time I've heard it becoming a political thing."

Both Bach and Meyers do confirm there would be some educational benefit to knowing the results sooner rather than later.

"It still would be beneficial for us to hear it. If we're strong in one area - or not - it gives us some feedback," says Meyers. "If we saw a deficiency in geography, we would get back in the department and say, 'How can we strengthen that?'"

"We're very eager to know the results the first time out, and how Andover students have performed," says Bach. "Obviously, we'd like to see them as soon as possible."

But in terms of using the test to change the curriculum, there's appears to be no rush.

Meyers says he doesn't believe the results of last year's test will be that important for Andover because Andover is in the middle of a three-year effort to make what is taught in Andover classes reflect what students will see on the state tests.

"We're making a complete shift to try to align (what's taught when) to what the state test will be," he says. "The test isn't really going to reflect accurately what we are teaching until we are about three years out, but we're into the process of moving that way as a system." As an example, Meyers says that if tenth-grade students will be tested on their knowledge of history from 500 A.D. until the present, then Andover wants ninth- and tenth-grade students studying that time frame.

"What I would hope is that the test does not become the entire curriculum," he says.

Cross Street isn't the spot for turtles

By Rebecca Lipchitz

An environmental report on the occurrence of rare species and vernal pools determined that the proposed site of a new middle school is free of both.

David Harding, construction project manager for plant and facilities, hired environmental consultant Brian Butler to investigate a resident's claims that the Cross Street property considered for a new middle school is home to rare species of amphibians and vernal pools, the only breeding ground for some aquatic life.

In a report issued this week, Butler, of Oxbow Wetlands Associates in Lunenburg, reported that he found three spots just outside the site that could potentially hold vernal pools, but only one was a certifiable vernal pool (see sidebar, at right).

He turned up no evidence that the rare blue-spotted salamander or spotted turtle make this site their home.

Resident Michael Jones spotted a spotted turtle on the site in 1997 and reported it to the town.

"My argument was to preserve an ecologically unique area, especially if its destruction isn't necessary," he says.

Butler found no evidence of blue-spotted salamander, and the report of a spotted turtle sighting was most likely a passing-through, he says.

Jones agreed that was a possibility, noting that the small spotted turtle population in Andover generally lives in the valley of Fish

What is a vernal pool?

According to the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, a vernal pool is a temporary body of freshwater that provides a critical habitat for many vertebrate and invertebrate wildlife species. They can be a few yards or acres wide.

"They come in all shapes and sizes," says Matthew Bume, environmental review assistant at DFW.

While they are often filled with spring rains and snow melt ("vernal" means spring), and then dry up in summer, many are filled in autumn and persist in winter. They are found in woods, meadows, sand flats, river floodplains and large vegetated wetland complexes.

A vernal pool must meet certain requirements of the Natural Heritage & Endangered Species Program to be certifiable. Criteria include: free of adult fish population, holding water for at least two months a year, used as a breeding habitat by certain species, like obligate species. Obligate species can only survive in vernal pools because they would be eaten up if living in an area with fish.

"If you find obligate species, you know you've got a vernal pool," Bume says.

Non-obligate (or facultative) species live in vernal pools but don't need to in order to survive. Non-obligate species include the American Toad, Green Frog, and Red-spotted Newt.

Of the 15 vernal pools registered in Andover, 10 are in the Harold Parker State Forest. Two are on private property and three are on conservation land, according to the Conservation Commission office.

Hazardous materials in town ...

Richard C. Laird, General Manager of U.S. Operations of Union Miniere optic materials manufacturer, says he believes many companies have reduced their use of toxic materials in business, but they can only adjust to a certain point.

"It totally depends on the end product. In some cases, there is no alternative," he says.

One obstacle facing Raytheon's effort to change their chemical habits is their client: the military.

Stephen Laberis, manager of environmental quality for Raytheon manufacturing operations, says that any change in the use of chemicals on a government project, down to the cleaning fluids they use on part, requires clearance from the government.

The government is cooperative with Raytheon's efforts to reduce their use of toxic chemicals, Laberis says, but changes do lead to a lot of paperwork and red tape.

"We are serious about our mission to reduce toxicity. There is a spirit of cooperation to work with us," he says.

Raytheon has tackled the use of toxic chemicals in manufacturing and in other plant operations partly through their Alternate Cleaning Technology company-wide project, which led to 100-percent elimination of a toxic chemical, TCE (trichloroethylene), used to clean circuit boards. It's been replaced in most instances with Turpene, a more organic solution made from orange rinds, which explains the smell of oranges in one area of the plant, Laberis says.

While the safer alternative isn't always the less expensive one, the consideration involved is "total chemical cost," Laberis says, which includes costs associated with labor and safety precautions.

"In the long run, it's well worth it," he says.

The company has also contracted out some chemical management to firms that specialize in that business, like Van Waters & Rogers of Salem where they buy and store chemicals for use by other companies, Laberis says.

The result of financial and environmental motivations, the attention to chemical management has brought all their use of toxic substances below levels that require them to report to local authorities, Laberis says.

Raytheon spokeswoman Toni Simonetti says a general awareness or social consciousness of environmental issues has led companies to less dangerous chemical practices in business, and the public-reporting component is a way to show the public how the company has changed.

Jack Geissert, associate director of environmental health and safety at Genetics Institute, whose outgoing voice-mail message amiably concludes with "Have a safe day," says he believes Genetics has made an effort to communicate with local departments and be open to the public about their chemical uses. "We are very open with the Fire Department. We show them every nook and cranny (of the building). Our staff is among the best," he says.

Genetics also uses recombinant DNA in its operations, and must obtain related special permits, but on the scale of biological materials that are regulated by the government, rDNA is ranked in the category of least-dangerous materials.

He also meets twice a year with local officials on the Biological Safety Committee to review projects and update authorities, he says.

The public's right to know which hazardous materials are in use in their communities is protected under federal law in section 302 of Superfund Authority and Redevelopment Act of 1986, or SARA.

SARA also requires companies using certain amounts of certain chemicals to report them to their local Board of Health (section 305); and submit information for an annual Fugitive Emissions Data Report (section 313) issued every summer.

Clean-up of chemical spills are handled sometimes by in-house on-call clean up crews, local fire, police and public works departments, and in more serious cases, through the State Emergency Response Committees (SERC) and Local Emergency Planning Committees (LEPC) established under the EPA.

The use and disposal of hazardous materials is also regulated by the state through the Department of Environmental Protection and at the local level through Fire and Health Departments.

Public information on local use of hazardous materials is available through the Andover Health Department, and on web sites from the DEP (state.ma.us/dep) and the federal EPA (www.epa.gov).

107 acres over to Conservation in 1985 since it was mostly wetlands and not suitable for building, says Conservation Commission Chairman Robert Pustell.

They kept the remaining 37 acres for a school building.

Jones says he thought the report was thorough, and plans to continue working to preserve the area by helping get the vernal pool certified.

Union Miniere move draws Fire Department's attention

A recent proposal before the Planning Board to move Union Miniere, an electronic-optic materials manufacturer based in Lowell, into Andover, raised questions about the use of hazardous materials in town.

While the Planning Board does not regulate use of hazardous materials, the Fire Department does.

Deputy Fire Chief Robert J. Boush says he would not issue a permit to the company for their current plan since it would use large amounts of hydrogen selenide in its production at 19 Connector Road, a building that also houses Global Furniture Co. While small amounts of the chemical are very dangerous, the problem with the proposal was not just the quantity of the material, but the proposal to use it in a building where other businesses were located, Boush says.

In a letter to the Planning Board about the project, Boush noted that despite all safety precautions the company uses, "the potential danger would exist of an accidental release of poisonous gas creating an unmanageable incident involving multiple tenants and their respective employees," he wrote.

Union Miniere General Manager Richard Laird still plans to seek a site plan special permit from the Planning Board despite the promise from the Fire Department that it would not issue a permit for the project as it is.

Union Miniere is presently operating in Lowell in a building with other businesses operating on either side of it, Laird says. In Andover, they plan to manufacture zinc selenide, an infrared transparent optical material used in manufacturing lasers. The production of zinc selenide involves the use of hydrogen selenide.

Everett Penney has been the Andover Health Department Director for 18 years, and is well-versed in chemistry given his background in pharmacy.

According to Penney, if a company is using certain amounts of certain chemicals, they are required to report them to local authorities. While the amount in use that requires reporting varies from substance to substance, most chemicals are reportable if used in quantities of 10,000 pounds a year or more, Penney says.

If a company is using one pound of hydrogen selenide a year, it must report that to authorities, Penney says. Union Miniere requested a permit to use 1,600 pounds of hydrogen selenide a year.

"A very small amount in the air can kill people," Penney says. Laird assured Planning Board members that the company's storage and handling of the material is safe, and expects to address Boush's concerns about the project with methods including the addition of exits to the building, evacuation plans and notification systems.

The public hearing before the Planning Board is continued to Tuesday, Aug. 11.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

SEALANTS FOR ADULTS, TOO

The American Dental Association has long urged parents to have the chewing surfaces of their children's back teeth coated with the protective plastic compound known as a "sealant" once their permanent teeth erupt. Doing so services to virtually eliminate the risk of cavities wherever the sealant is applied. Now, dentists are recommending the same procedure for adults. The application of sealants is particularly appropriate in cases where an adult's molars and bicuspids have pits and fissures, which are tiny holes and crevices that are too small for toothbrush bristles to clean. Sealants can be applied in a matter of minutes at a cost that is far less than that of drilling and filling a tooth.

Along with a toothbrush, toothpaste, and dental floss, dental sealants can be an adult's (or kid's) best friend. All help prevent the advance of tooth decay and all promote a healthy, cavity-free mouth. Has it been awhile since you've been to the dentist? Call us at 475-2431 today and get back into a healthy routine of dental care. Our patients enjoy coming to us at 296 Lowell Street, Rt 133, with easy access off Rt 93, with our friendly staff, comfortable offices, and very up to date equipment and techniques.

P.S. Because sealants wear over time, they must be periodically reapplied.

Andover Avalanche win Billerica Memorial Day soccer tournament

Andover Avalanche are Division II champions of the 13th Annual Billerica Memorial Day Tournament with a 2-0 win over Dracut. In the preliminary round, Andover opened with a 2-2 tie against Dracut and then posted two wins over the Burlington Blazers 7-0 and Billerica Spirit 4-0. In semifinal action, Andover faced host Billerica again, and were scoreless at the half 0-0 before breaking out for three straight goals to move on to the final. Facing the Dracut club, the Avalanche took a 1-0 lead into half-time, pushed a second goal across six minutes into the second period, and then tightened the defense for a 2-0 victory.

The outstanding goalkeeping of Jeff Knipper and William Woodward combined for four shutouts. The defense of Brian Alberico, Colin Callahan-Higgins, Robbie Ginsberg, Jon Haerer, Michael Pescatore and Andy Prezko were key in shutting down the opposition in the final two games. In transition at midfield, Tom Salerno, Michael Dunn, Chris Broillard, Anthony Delorenzo and Kanye Maqubela kept the offense moving. Scoring multiple goals were Matt Schiff, Chris Broillard Kanye Maqubela and Nick Webber, with goals by Evan Rossignol, Alex Lirette, Anthony Delorenzo and William Woodward.

The Avalanche finished the Essex County Youth Soccer League with an 8-0 fall record and a 7-0-1 spring season to qualify for the District Championships. The Avalanche joined other Andover Youth Soccer teams at the Pingree School for the ECYSA District competition. After a bye in the first round, Andover faced an undefeated Ipswich team in the quarterfinals, taking a 4-1 lead early in the second half on the way to a 4-2 win. The second game of the day was a semifinal contest against Lynn. Andover took a 1-0 lead in the first half on a goal by Chris Broillard and kept the lead in the very physical game through halftime boosted by the goaltending of Jeff Knipper. Lynn took a 2-1 lead in the second half and the undermanned Avalanche team gave up two late goals for a 4-1 loss.

Stephen and Elizabeth Mancuso will compete for the Northeast Region in the Bay State Summer Games. Stephen, 21, a senior at Villanova University in Philadelphia and a member of the Villanova volleyball team, will compete in the Men's Open Division in volleyball at M.I.T. Elizabeth, 12, an eighth-grader at Austin Prep in Reading and a member of the Merrimack Valley Pirate Swim Club, will compete in the Women's Junior Division in swimming at Harvard University. The Bay State Games begin July 16 with the opening ceremony at the FleetCenter and run through July 26.

SPORTS

Little Leaguers impressive in tourney openers

Andover may have two teams to be reckoned with in the Major 11-12 Division of the annual District 14 Little League All-Star Tournament.

Both were impressive in their tourney openers, Andover National trimming Lowell Highland 8-1 at the Bailey School field in Lowell and Andover American hammering host Lawrence Prospect Hill 16-3 in a game shortened to four innings by the 10-run mercy rule.

National's Chris Vining (grand slam) and American's Jonathan DeLeo (two homers, eight RBI) were the key offensive performers.

Andover's two other entries in older divisions of the double-elimination tournament were both ousted, the Junior 13s after a 9-5 loss to Lawrence West and the Senior 14-15s following an 10-3 setback to Billerica American.

The Andover Juniors bowed out with a 1-2 record while the Seniors were beaten two straight.

Andover is always at a disadvantage in the two upper age divisions of the tourney because many good players choose to compete with Andover Blue and Gold in the Suburban Pony League.

Schedule

Both Major 11-12 teams returned to action last night, after Townsman presstime, in winner's bracket quarterfinals.

Andover American (1-0) was again on the road as it faced Chelmsford Fitts (1-0) at Scully Field in Chelmsford.

Fitts (1-0) earned its berth with an 8-7 squeeze past Methuen.

Andover National (1-0) was at Deyermund Field hosting Billerica National (1-0), a 22-1 winner over Tewksbury American in their lopsided first rounder.

Last night's two victors square off Sunday in a winner's bracket semifinal, setting up a possible Andover vs. Andover battle.

If either or both Andover teams lost last night, they are still alive in loser's bracket games scheduled Saturday with the opponent, site and time to be determined.

MAJOR 11-12 DIVISION Andover National 8 Lowell Highland 1

Chris Vining's mammoth grand slam to straightaway center field capped an eight-run explosion in the top of the fourth, as A-N did all its damage in one inning against host Highland.

Trailing 1-0 entering the fourth, the Nationals started the rally with a single by Mark Boilard, walk to Scott Mancinelli and one-out single by Matt Furness to load the bases.

Steve Beck tied the

Jonathan DiLeo was a one-boy wrecking crew with a perfect 4-for-4 night and eight RBI.

game with an RBI single, and Graham Gilbert put the locals ahead with a bases-loaded walk to plate Mancinelli.

Martin Johnson followed with a two-run single, Brian Buckley singled to again load the bases, and Vining clouted his grand slam to take most of the fight out of Highland.

Righthander Kyle Ahern picked up the pitching victory with four strong innings. He scattered three singles, struck out eight and walked one.

Beck mopped up with two innings of hitless relief, fanning four and walking one to close out the win.

Buckley (double) and Beck led the 10-hit A-N attack with two safeties each.

Defensive standouts for the Nationals, who only had to make six plays in the field, were leftfielder Matt Hill, second baseman Furness and Gilbert at catcher.

Andover American 16 Prospect Hill 3

Jonathan DiLeo was a one-boy wrecking crew with a perfect 4-for-4 night and eight RBI.

He was unstoppable at the plate, belting two long homers, two doubles and scoring four runs.

The locals wasted no time jumping to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first. Sam Basta, 3-for-3 with three runs scored, spanked a single and Steve Renfro walked.

DeLeo then launched his first bomb over the fence in left-center for a three-run homer, and Jason Edelstein followed with a gigantic solo homer to center field.

Basta singled again in the second and rode home on DeLeo's second dinger which boosted the lead to 6-1.

Ryan Nadelson opened the seven-run third with a single, Brent Hyde reached on an error and Toby Cohen walked to load the bases.

Brendan Smith singled home two runs, Basta spanked an RBI single, Renfro walked, and DeLeo collected two more RBI with a double to right-center.

Dennis Collins jump-started the Andover fourth with a pinch-hit double to right-center. Renfro ripped an RBI single to right, and DeLeo barely missed a third homer when his run-scoring double hit the top of the fence. Tim Hughes' sacfly rescued the final run.

Lefty Joel Keefe chalked up the pitching victory after yielding four hits, fanning four and walking five over the four-inning distance.

The Americans finished with 14 hits including the four by DeLeo, three by Basta and two from Smith.

Renfro played a solid defensive game at second base.

bounced the locals from the tourney in a loser's bracket game at Andover High.

Andover had previously ripped North Andover, 15-8, and dropped a 14-3 decision to Chelmsford Lupien.

Lawrence West was beaten by Methuen 9-4 in its tourney opener.

The locals managed 13 hits but left a number of baserunners stranded throughout the game.

Lawrence West grabbed a 2-1 lead in the second, increased it to 6-1 with four runs in the fourth, and made it 9-2 after adding their final three in the top of the seventh.

Andover rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh and had two runners aboard when the game ended.

The locals' first run came on second-inning singles by Jarrett Mackin, William Walter and Jordan Thibault (RBI).

Three more singles in the sixth by Thibault, Chris Vetrano and Andrew Santos (RBI) brought in the second run.

In the seventh Paul Burke singled, Paul Chiozzi doubled, Pat Wadland lashed an RBI single and Mackin reached on an error to plate Chiozzi.

After two flyouts, Vetrano's RBI single completed the scoring.

Mackin, Burke, Thibault and Vetrano had two hits each and Greg Hartwell also had a single.

Walter and Vetrano split the pitching duties.

"The kids gave it a good run," said manager Art Santos. "Lawrence played with a little more zip, and we also helped them by issuing a lot of walks."

"Most of the other towns in the tournament don't have a Pony League. That definitely makes a difference because we lose a lot of good players."

The Andover Junior 13 All-Stars are currently playing in the Methuen Invitational Tournament, where they beat Hudson, N.H. 16-5 in their opening game.

They will also compete in the Chelmsford Invitational Tournament later this month.

Suppose for some reason you decide you want to part ways with your Saturn. (Like maybe you want to buy another one or something.) Well, thanks to polymer body-side panels this shouldn't be too difficult. You see, besides having long-lasting engines, Saturns stay relatively new-looking because the polymer panels resist rust, dents and dings. They're just really durable.

The all-new 1998 Dodge Ram Quad Cab
Tom Manzi Dodge, Inc.

"The all-new Ram Quad Cab is the only extended cab, full-size pickup to offer four doors. The Quad Cab, with its wide, tall, six-passenger seating provides plenty of room with a view, and easy exit with four "fool-proof" doors.

Owning a full-size pickup no longer means living with outdated rules about what a truck can or cannot be. The all-new Ram Quad breaks every set of rules. Tom Manzi commented, "The Ram Quad Cab is comfortable, quiet, safety-conscious as a car, and has real torque power available with the legendary Magnum engine."

Since 1956, Tom Manzi Dodge has been providing quality service and sales to the community. In fact, the dealership was voted the best place to purchase an automobile by the "Greater Methuen/Lawrence's 2nd Annual Best Businesses For 1998." Their Number One attraction is surely customer satisfaction.

Tom Manzi Dodge's superior sales and service team is responsible for bringing repeat customers back again to purchase a new or used car or truck. They also service Jeep/Eagle and Chrysler/ Plymouth vehicles.

Tom Manzi Dodge also has a large inventory of quality program vehicle for sale, which are former lease, fleet, and rental vehicles.

Tom Manzi Dodge is located at Merrimack Street and South Broadway in Lawrence. It is open seven days a week for sales. Service hours are Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday, 8 a.m. to noon. Telephone: (978) 683-9591. 7/16/98 Laurie Levy

Post 8 baseball stretches undefeated streak through 12 games

A brilliant three-hit shutout by Paul Wysocki lifted the Andover Post 8 American Legion baseball team to a 3-0 victory over Lawrence Post 15, highlighting another successful week for the over-achieving locals.

Post 8 collected three more victories, following a 5-5 tie with Methuen Post 122, to stretch its undefeated streak through 12 games and improve the overall Zone 8 record to 10-1-2.

In addition to Lawrence, the locals belted Haverhill Post 4 and Marblehead Post 32 by 11-2 and 18-3 scores respectively.

Andover heads into the final weekend of regular season play as one of seven teams battling for the five available State Tournament preliminary round playoff berths.

Also embroiled in the race are Peabody Post 153, Lynn Post 6, Gloucester, Newburyport Post 150, Lawrence and Revere Post 61.

The seven were only three points apart in the Zone 8 standings as this week's action began.

The regular season ends this Sunday, and the five playoff qualifiers will join three teams from Zone 5 in four best-of-3 preliminary round series.

nary round series.

The eight-team double-elimination State Tournament, to be played in Sandwich on Cape Cod, is scheduled for the first week of August.

Schedule

Defending Zone 8 champ Andover returns to action tonight against Danvers Post 180 at Twi Field in Danvers (6 p.m.).

Post 8 is home for an afternoon double-header on Saturday at Merrimack College, the locals hosting East Boston Post 30 in a makeup game at 1:30 and battling Newburyport at 4:30 p.m.

The remarkable thing about Andover's showing this summer is the majority of players are 15- and 16-year-olds with at least two more years of Legion eligibility.

Andover 3 Lawrence 0

Lawrence Post 15, which fell to 8-4-1 with this loss, entered riding a four-game unbeaten streak.

But Paul Wysocki (3-0, two saves) outduelled Lawrence ace Al Mottram to strengthen Andover's position in the struggle for playoff berths.

"Wysocki pitched another gem," said Post 8 manager Joe Iarrobino. "It was a classic pitcher's duel. Mottram (who struck out over 20 batters in a recent extra-inning marathon) was also on top of his game."

"We scored all three runs in one inning, helped by two bunt singles we couldn't have placed any better by rolling them out by hand. There were a couple other timely hits and some excellent defense. Both teams played well but it was our night."

"Paul (who beat powerhouse Peabody earlier this season) has matured as a pitcher," said Iarrobino. "He's learned how to keep his emotions in check. He doesn't lose his composure in situations that would have rattled him before. Now, when little things go wrong he shakes them off."

Lawrence had at least one baserunner in five of the seven innings, but Post 15 never threatened seriously.

Wysocki yielded only three singles, struck out five and walked two.

Lawrence managed just one hit after the first inning, and from the second through fourth frames Wysocki retired nine straight batters.

Post 15 had seven baserunners in all on three hits, two walks and two Andover errors.

Mottram countered with a six-hitter, fanning five and issuing no walks.

Mark Rocca laced a single to left to start the three-run rally in the bottom of the sixth at Merrimack College.

Rick Johnson and Danny Hughes followed with consecutive perfectly-placed bunts, both of which hugged the foul line for singles.

Ben Gibson's sacrifice fly to left rescued Rocca with the only run necessary. With two outs, Johnson and Hughes pulled a double steal and Ryan Hanigan followed with a single to left plating the two insurance runs.

Wysocki issued one walk in the seventh, but completed the shutout effort by retiring the next two batters on a grounder to first baseman Gibson and grounder to third baseman Rocca.

Rocca produced an excellent defensive

Piano Bar at Val's

Val's Sandwich Shop

Val's Sandwich Shop is one of the Andovers best kept secret. For over two years Val's in North Andover has been serving the community good food at moderate prices.

More than a sandwich shop, Val's serves breakfast, lunch, and dinner in an open airy, Florida-like atmosphere where you are greeted by a courteous staff and home-made food is the bill of fare.

Good morning at Val's means muffins & coffee, omelets & home-fries, pancakes & sausage, or a hungry man's special. Lunch brings out the club sandwiches, deli, burgers, Roast Beef Boursin, and the Chick Cordon Bleu. Dinner house favorites are chicken, broccoli & penne, London broil, pasta prima verde, and daily specials. Friday night is piano bar night at Val's where you can enjoy dinner with wine or beer while listening to your favorite piano tunes. Finish your fine meal with an espresso or cappuccino.

Whether you are dining alone, and intimate party of two, or hosting a corporate business luncheon, Val's offers several seating options — table, booth, bistro, or counter.

Owner and chef, John Valentino says his restaurant "strives to serve quantity and quality food at affordable prices topped with excellent service."

Post 8 baseball stretches undefeated streak through 12 games

play to end the fifth, making a diving stop with runners at first and second before tagging third base for the forceout.

Rocca finished the game 2-for-2, including a double, and Charlie Daher chipped in a single.

Owen Casella, Chad Davis and Mottram had the three Lawrence hits.

Andover 11 Haverhill 2

In the nightcap of a doubleheader against different teams, Post 8 scored in every inning and received a strong pitching performance from righthander Jason Daley on the way to victory over dangerous-but-inconsistent Haverhill (6-6) at Merrimack College.

Daley (3-0) worked 6 2/3 innings, allowing only four hits and one earned run while whiffing five and walking one.

"Jason has pitched well all season but this was definitely his best effort of the summer," said Iarrobino. "He kept both his curve and fastball down (in the strike zone)."

"He really wanted the complete game, and I wanted him to get it, but Jason struggled a little in the seventh and his pitch count was high."

Charlie Daher was summoned to get the final out and whiffed the only batter he faced.

In the Andover first, Ben Gibson ripped a two-out triple to left-center and scored on Scott Petersen's single. Petersen stole second and crossed on Ryan Hanigan's single to left.

Rick Johnson singled home Gibson, who walked and took second on Dave Powers' sacrifice bunt, to make it 3-0 after two innings.

A three-run Post 8 third featured singles by Gibson, Petersen and Hanigan (RBI), a sac-fly by Daher and an RBI triple to left by Mike Giles.

In the fourth Johnson walked, stole second and scored on Gibson's third hit. After Gibson was picked off base, Petersen singled and Hanigan launched a triple to left-center to hike the lead to 8-1.

Giles singled, Johnson lashed a two-out RBI single and Danny Hughes clubbed a run-scoring double to right for a 10-1 bulge after five innings.

Andover's final run came in the sixth when Hanigan doubled and Daher spanked an RBI single.

Post 4 added an unearned run in the seventh to complete the scoring.

Hanigan led the 17-hit barrage with a perfect 4-for-4 afternoon, including a double and triple, while Gibson finished 3-for-3. Petersen was 3-for-4, Giles 2-for-2 and leadoff batter Johnson 2-for-4.

Hanigan drove in three runs, while Johnson and Daher had two ribbies each.

Petersen scored three runs while Johnson, Gibson, Hanigan and Giles each crossed twice.

Paul Boudreau ripped a double and single for Haverhill.

Defensive standouts for Andover were Johnson at short (five assists) and Dave Powers in left field (four putouts).

Flanagan earns third varsity letter in baseball

Brian Flanagan of Andover, a recent graduate of Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., earned his third varsity letter in baseball this spring.

Flanagan, the starting second baseman throughout the season and a team captain, played in 32 of the Cardinals 33 games. He collected 24 hits, including six doubles, and posted a .253 batting average.

He also scored 20 runs, added 18 RBI, stole two bases and had a .951 fielding percentage with 61 putouts and 75 assists.

Over three seasons at Wesleyan, Flanagan played 76 games at second base with 63 starts. He laced 69 hits and batted .304 while also scoring 44 runs and amassing 53 RBI.

Andover 18 Marblehead 3

Post 8 scored five runs in the bottom of the first inning, and added 10 more in the second to put Marblehead Post 32 away early in this mismatch at Merrimack College's Warrior Field.

Fourteen players contributed to the 21-hit Andover assault.

Leading the way were Charlie Daher (three hits, two RBI, two runs scored), Mike Giles (double, triple, three RBI, three runs) and Scott Petersen (triple, single, three RBI, two runs).

Rick Johnson and Ryan Hanigan both had two hits and scored twice, Ben Gibson two hits and three runs scored, and Josh Topp belted a two-run triple.

Jeff Marshall doubled, and other basehits were contributed by Dave Powers, Danny Hughes (RBI), Andy Bellistri, Rich Sheldon, Mark Rocca (RBI) and Bob Mazza.

Lefthander Sheldon (1-0) earned the pitching victory with four innings of one-hit work. He fanned six, walked one and yielded one unearned run.

Giles mopped up with three frames of two-hit ball, walking one and whiffing one.

Highlighting the defense was a rare 3-4-1 double play from Gibson to Bellistri to Giles.

Andover 5 Methuen 5

Post 8 squandered a 5-0 third-inning lead and had to settle for its second consecutive darkness-shortened six-inning 5-5 tie (earlier with Salem).

Methuen Post 122 salvaged the point with single runs in the fourth, fifth and three more in the top of the sixth to pull even.

Paul Wysocki started and pitched two hitless innings for Andover.

"His arm wasn't sore, but he complained about some tightness so we (assistant coach Kevin Rourke) decided to take him out," said Iarrobino.

Mark Rocca worked the next three innings, and Charlie Daher came on to put out the Methuen fire in the sixth. Daher struck out two and didn't allow a hit in his one inning of relief.

The evening got off to a promising start as Post 8 scored four runs in the bottom of the first.

Danny Hughes stroked a one-out single, Ben Gibson walked, Scott Petersen laced an RBI single, Ryan Hanigan clouted a two-run triple to left-center and Daher smacked a RBI single.

Andover added an unearned run in the third when Dave Powers reached on a two-base error, took third on Rich Sheldon's bloop single and scored on Rick Johnson's single.

Hanigan and Daher led the eight-hit attack with two safeties each.

For Post 122, leadoff batter Tim Koerner went 3-for-4 (double) and run-scoring hits were contributed by Cliff Towne, Mark Provencal and A.J. Grasso.

Gibson made the defensive play of the game at first base, his backhand stab starting a crisp 3-6-3 double play with shortstop Johnson the middleman.

Last spring, as a junior, Flanagan hit .431 and was named a New England Small College Athletic Conference All-Star.

Wesleyan went 17-15 this year, qualifying for the ECAC Division III playoffs where it lost 7-6 to eventual champ Babson College in the opening round.

Flanagan is a 1994 graduate of Phillips Academy where he was a four-time letterwinner in ice hockey and four-time letterwinner, MVP and two-time Prep School All-Star in baseball.

At Wesleyan, Flanagan received his degree in economics, was a four-time letterman in ice hockey as a forward and was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

A design public hearing will be held by the Massachusetts Highway Department to discuss the proposed transportation improvements for I-93 in the Town of Andover.

WHERE: The Selectmen's Conference Room
Town Offices Building - 3rd floor
36 Bartlett Street Andover, MA 01810

WHEN: Wednesday, July 29, 1998 at 7:30PM

PURPOSE: To provide the public with an opportunity to become fully acquainted with the proposed transportation improvement project. All views and comments made at this hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The proposed project will improve I-93 from Wilmington to the New Hampshire state border. The project area begins just North of the I-93/Route 125 Interchange, where I-93 narrows from 8 lanes to 6 lanes, and continues north to the New Hampshire border, a distance of 17 kilometers (10.5 miles). This segment of I-93 lies within the Towns of Wilmington, Tewksbury, Andover and Methuen Massachusetts.

The purpose of the project is to ease traffic congestion during the daily peak periods by converting the existing shoulder lanes to general purpose travel lanes. Use of shoulder lane as a travel lane requires the construction of emergency turnouts beyond the edge of existing pavement to provide refuge for disabled vehicles when the breakdown lanes are used for travel. These turnouts are planned approximately every 0.8 kilometers (0.5 miles) along I-93 within the project area; except for locations where exit ramps can be used for emergency egress from the roadway. The proposed project comprises the minimal level of improvements needed to reduce peak period congestion in the project area without constructing new lanes.

All work will be done within the existing State Highway Layout.

Written views received by the Department subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements at the public hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to Thomas F. Broderick, P.E., Chief Engineer Massachusetts Highway Department, Ten Park Plaza Boston Massachusetts 02116. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. The final date for receipt of these statements and exhibits will be ten (10) days after the public hearing.

Plans will be on display for one half hour before the hearing, with an Engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project.
